

Posting Bail

There are several ways someone can be released prior to trial. One way is by posting bail. If a person has been charged with a crime or served a warrant that designates bail, the person can post bail. In most cases, inmates may have someone post 10% of the total bail to be released. If an individual has enough money in his/her commissary account to post bail, that person can self-bail. In some cases, however, full bail is required. If you want to post bail, call the jail (503-325-8641) to confirm the correct amount of bail money needed for release.

There are no bail bondsmen in Oregon.
